One last march 500 graduates to walk in weekend ceremonies

by Katie Gregowicz
Alestle Reporter

SIUE will host its 92nd commencement Saturday at the Vadalabene Center.

Two different ceremonies are scheduled. The first ceremony will begin at 9 a.m. and is for students from the School of Business, School of Education and part of the Graduate School. The second ceremony, at 1 p.m., is for students graduating from the College of Arts and Sciences, School of Engineering, School of Nursing and the remainder of the Graduate School. Each ceremony should last about two hours.

William Hendey, director of Academic Counseling and Advising, will be the speaker at the 9 a.m. ceremony and emeritus dean of the School of Engineering Paul Seaburg will speak at the later one. Student speakers at the ceremonies will be Tim West from the School of Business at 9 a.m., and Justin Smith from the College of Arts and Sciences at 1 p.m.

Coordinator for commencement Jean Paterson said student speakers are nominated by faculty and deans from each school.

"The deans and provost review the applications and pick it up from there," Paterson said.

Paterson said about 500 students will be walking in the ceremonies on Saturday. She said more students are graduating, but not planning to walk.

According to the SIUE commencement Web site, seating at the Vadalabene Center is on a first-come, first-served basis.

Graduates should meet in the Student Fitness Center one hour before their commencement is scheduled to begin.

Mass comm grad reflects on path at SIUE, Alestle

by Steve Berry

There are many paths leading to SIUE and within SIUE. Sometimes students or professors make their own paths at SIUE. The paths can either be officially accepted and paved with asphalt – like the little blacktop path next to the southeast corner of Dunham Hall – or the paths can be unofficially rejected – like the former dirt trail through the pines at the northwest side of Peck Hall. Simple shrubbery put an end to that path.

For 3 1/2 years I have shared a walking path from the "red lots" to the campus core with my fellow non-traditional commuter students. Now, it is finally time to graduate.

The time could have come sooner. After high school, I casually fooled around at a community college for a few semesters before quitting to work full time. I spot welded together football helmet facemasks at a factory in Litchfield, Ill. After a year of factory work, I decided it was time to get back in school. For a short time, I commuted from my apartment in Glen Carbon to work at the factory in Litchfield, where coworkers would ask, "What are you going to school for?"

I felt like the meaning of the question was not, what degree are you seeking? But, why are you enrolled in school?

I enrolled at SIUE to gain knowledge and resources, and I am really happy I did.

I chose a path that brought me onto campus on the weekends to do photo assignments for the Alestle. Being on the quad on a Saturday night around 7 p.m. is a special experience because there is no one around. It is strange to be in such a constructed environment without any people around. It is comparable to being in parts of downtown St. Louis late on a Saturday night.

Leaving campus at dusk is another special experience because of the large number of deer that appear everywhere, even bucks with antlers, and newborn fawns with spots. Sometimes I played like I was on safari, opening the sunroof of my girlfriend's car and popping out the top with my camera.

I made my way through SIUE the same way many people have. Working as a photographer for the Alestle forced me to go in every direction on the campus map.

Morning commencement 'His leadership stands out among others'

by Allan Lewis
Alestle Reporter

There are many students senior business administration major Tim West feels deserve the honor of speaking at commencement. West however, is one of few chosen as he will take the stage and will represent the School of Business at the 9 a.m. ceremony Saturday.

Tim West

"It is exciting to share something with my friends and classmates," West said. "I know there are a lot of deserving people other than myself, so I am honored and can't wait until commencement."

Timothy Schoenecker, Acting Dean of the School of Business, said West stood out in part for his exceptional leadership qualities.

"Tim is a very good student leader in the School of Business," Schoenecker said. "His leadership stands out among others."

West first came to SIUE as a music student and has been employed at WSIE throughout his tenure at the university. He currently serves as its director of staff operations.

"Aside from WSIE, I also joined WebRadio and became president for two years while I was more interested in broadcasting and music," West said. "Since then, I have decided to take a stronger career approach to my education, so I entered the School of Business."

Aside from his experience in the radio, West has also been involved in Emerging Leaders Improving Through Experience and as the Web developer for Judy Woodruff, director of development in the School of Business.

"Tim has been very instrumental in helping us with our Web pages," Woodruff said. "He is very conscientious and hard worker and is just a great person to have around."

When looking back on SIUE, West said he has had a great experience.

"I have built some great relationships with faculty and staff that I hope to keep up with after graduation," West said. "I am excited about coming back in a few years and seeing how things have grown."

Afternoon commencement Grad balances military, academic careers

by Kenneth Long
Alestle Correspondent

After going between Iraq and SIUE for almost six years, Justin R. Smith is graduating.

Smith, a speech communications major, will speak at graduation this Saturday. He was chosen based on his resume, letters of recommendation and other criteria.

Justin Smith

Smith said he believes he was chosen because of his diverse background, good grades and his commitment to both SIUE and the Army.

Smith joined the Army in 1999, after graduating from high school. He did his basic training at Fort Benning. He started his college career in the spring of 2002. For him, college life was an easy adjustment.

"Basic training was almost like college," Smith said. "I had a roommate, I went to school and then to work."

He was involved with the Sociology Club and intramural sports, including football, basketball and water polo. He was also subsequently on the dean's list many semesters.

Smith said his biggest commitment in college was to ROTC. He will serve as Baton Commander this spring as a part-time faculty member.

Cathy Harmon, a department secretary for ROTC who has known Smith for about 3 years, said Smith is an exceptional student who sticks out in a crowd.

"He's very active and reliable," Harmon said. "He's one of those guys who has it all together."

Smith commended the Speech Communications Department on its curriculum.

He also said SIUE's ROTC program has an excellent battalion.

Smith first went to Iraq at the beginning of the conflict. He has gone twice since he started college; he said he has only been at SIUE for three years in all.

"It was hard, going back and forth," Smith said. "You fall out of the school setting, and when you come back, it's hard to adjust."

WEST

After graduation, West hopes to join Boeing or Monsanto and work in business strategy or as a junior project manager.

“I would like to challenge myself with the great stuff (either company) is doing,” West said. “Both opportunities sound really exciting.”

In his speech, West said he will share some knowledge with others looking to find jobs.

“I think that most of the business school students are in the same situation looking for a career,” West said. “It has to deal with finding direction and being passionate about what you do.”

In the Army, Smith attained the ranking of E-6. He is currently a cadet, but starting Friday, he will be promoted to lieutenant.

Smith was also awarded the Bronze Star during his service in the Army. He plans to go back into the Army after graduating and work at SIUE as a part-time faculty member.

He plans on going career with the Army and hopes to make Lieutenant Colonel before he retires.

“With the Army, you strive for excellence and brotherhood,” Smith said. “You just can’t achieve that kind of camaraderie any other way.”
